Villence Buchanan - Catch of the Day

Villence Buchanan is a passionate visual artist whose deep connection to nature and lifelong love for art are vividly reflected in her work. Villence pursued formal studies in art through to Advanced Level at secondary school in London, England, laying a strong foundation in her creative journey. Villence's work has been exhibited and sold internationally, with collectors in the Caribbean, the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada who are drawn to her meticulous attention to details and vibrant compositions. A naturalist at heart, she is inspired by the beauty of the natural world, with birds, fruits, vegetables, and occasional portraits of iconic figures featuring prominently in her portfolio.

This painting was inspired by local fishermen who entice potential customers with the fresh fish they have caught that day. They are a regular feature in all districts of our community - recognisable by the display of brightly coloured fish slung together, still glistening with the life of the sea. Observing them, proudly displaying their catch, has become a quiet but powerful reminder of the enduring connection between people, tradition, and nature in the Cayman Islands.
